Challenges Faced by SMEs

High Recruitment Costs

Hiring an accountant or a full-time accounting department requires paying salaries & other benefits such as health insurance and other allowances, which increases the financial burden on companies.

Continuous Update Requirements

Accounting standards are constantly changing, which means that companies need to invest time and resources in continuously training their accountants to keep them updated on the latest standards.

Lack of Skills and Expertise

Some markets suffer from a shortage of experienced and qualified accountants, making the process of finding the right employee difficult and time-consuming.

Challenges Faced by SMEs

Limited Flexibility

Permanent accountants may not provide the necessary flexibility to meet changing or seasonal business needs, prompting companies to consider alternative solutions such as outsourcing.

Difficulty Retaining Top Employees

Top accountants often have multiple job opportunities, leading to higher employee turnover rates. Retaining qualified accountants within the company may require offering competitive benefits.

Reduced Focus on Core Business Activities

Hiring full-time accountants consumes significant time and effort from support functions that could be invested in other activities more important for growth and development.
